In selecting classes to help prepare yourself for law school, you should take challenging courses and those that interest you, but no specific courses are required or recommended. The American Bar Association recommends numerous skills and values as helpful in preparation for a legal education, including analytical and problem solving skills, critical reading abilities, writing skills, oral communication and listening skills, general research skills, task organization and management skills, an appreciation for accounting, economic, or financial principles, and the values of serving others and promoting justice (Pre-Law Committee of the ABA Section of Legal Education and Admissions to the Bar, Preparing for Law School http://www.americanbar.org/groups/legal_education/resources/pre_law.html). Consult the ABA network for more information and to assess your areas of strengths and challenges. Below is a list of law and public policy-related courses that the University of Kansas offers or has offered which may serve to affirm (or disaffirm) your interest in studying law. However, these should not be taken thinking they will give you an extra advantage in law school.
